CIVIL DEFENSE.

PUBLIC SAFETY

At Pearl Harbor, ten years ago this December 7th, the quiet, rest and peace of a Sunday morning was shattered by the terrifying roar of enemy bombers and the fury of high explosive bombs. Unannounced, unexpected, the United States was suddenly at war.

At that time the pattern for future aggressors was established: Surprise Attack!

In late October, 1947, Maine residents were alarmed to find great portions of their state ablaze in a chain of forest fires, accentuated and made more dangerous by a summer-long drought.

In 1949, the President of the United States announced that a potential enemy of our country was known to have the atomic bomb, as well as the planes to deliver it.

These three events, separated by years and thousands of miles, influenced the legislature of the State of Maine to establish, in 1949, the Office of Maine Civil Defense and Public Safety.

This newspaper, as a public service, and in cooperation with the Maine Office of Civil Defense and Public Safety, will bring to its readers a series of weekly articles designed to emphasize the importance of a strong, well-organized, fully-manned Civil Defense structure in our state.

If you take an active part in the Civil Defense and Public Safety program, you may assist in the saving of your life and property—perhaps your own! Read these articles to learn the part you can play!

SEPTEMBER BUILDING SLUMPS IN NEW ENGLAND
New England construction awards tumbled 70 per cent in September from the August totals, according to the monthly survey of Gaiety's Construction News, daily New England building industry report.

All states showed declines in September except for Vermont which jumped 118 per cent over its August volume.

Maine's loss was 87 per cent, Massachusetts 76 per cent, Connecticut 62 per cent, Rhode Island 59 per cent, and New Hampshire 9 per cent.

New England dollar building volume for September slumped 34 per cent from the corresponding month in 1950.

September volume for the six states was $11,412,528.98 compared to $67,437,662 for the same month last year, and $13,412,215.59 for August.

Residential building declined 60 per cent from September in 1950, while industrial building was up 230 per cent. Public works jumped 63 per cent, but private building slid 77 per cent.

By LITTLE HULL

IF THE VARIOUS state department officials and advisers who have been accused of having brought about the downfall of the anti-Communist Nationalist government of China were really working for the Kremlin, it would relieve the administration of some extent of the full blame for the awful situation which we now face. It is certain Russia would choose as her agents in an affair of such magnitude and importance the possessors of the most brilliant minds. Our present administration is not notable for outstanding mentality, and if it succumbed to the seeming logic of far smarter men, it would bear a lesser blame.

But everyone whose name has been brought into these recent investigations has sworn to his loyalty and patriotism, and the administration has backed him up. These men are good patriots, and our government stands convicted of such startling stupidity in the management of foreign affairs as to brand it hopeless.

This nation has been forced into the leadership of the free world and should be capable of combating the deadly menace if her leaders are smart enough.

But the errors in judgment of the Democratic administrations of the last 20 years have been so colossal and so destructive, that we have already lost a number of natural allies and others are beginning to sidestep us.

Europeans forget their own awful mistakes when they begin to revel in criticism of ours. They growled in the face when they accused Telsa and Polesani; of the loss of India and China; of the debacle of India and the Arab states; for all of which they hold us responsible.

Our government is fast losing the free world's respect for its judgment and with it the leadership so essential to the survival of freedom. If we can hold out until the 1952 election we will still survive and defeat the menace, if we what an "if." The American value use their brains.

LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Today I am giving the ladies, then on a chance to brag about what they have done since they got the ball back under 50 or so years ago. They can tell us how hard and pretty everything is now, or maybe they can show the whole thing and tell us how come saloons are even more plentiful now than a 1000 dollar car now costs 200 and not less as it was when the old pelicans were running the saloons alone.

We now have power shortages in that dominated regions we can be found in the corners of caught with gold chains on our person, we have rationing, we have confusing ceilings and floors shifted on us over night—we have an income tax man fingered our paycheck—we have a 5 cent loaf of bread—we have a 5 cent short beer—we have a black firewater—we have just about everything 100 per cent, that we don't like.

Now gain what I want to know is, what is the fly in the ointment, why is everything not sweet and lovely. Why is a good girl hard to find—why do you have no more food in the ice box than 25 years ago maybe less.

Come right out with it, did the boy you voted for have a tie you liked, also did he have wavy hair, and also, maybe, did it turn out that he was not too pretty in the bean or what? You were going to clean up to him now you will feel better tell us.

Yours with the low-down, JO BEIRA

KITTORY PUBLISHER IS AN EDITOR OF OUTDOOR MAGAZINE

The following article will be of local interest as Mrs. Mitchell is the former Jeannette Gordon, daughter of the late Rev. Mur-chie A. Gordon and Mrs. Gordon, Bethel residents for several years while Mr. Gordon was pastor of the Methodist Church.

Horace Mitchell, Kittory, publisher, composes, prints and edits the "Kittory Press," a weekly paper. In his spare moments he is game breeding editor of "Sports Afford," a national outdoor magazine of good reputation.

Mr. Mitchell has been in the game breeding field for many years and was one of the first men to raise pheasants without a lot of hullabaloo and fancy trimmings. In good old Maine fashion, he set about, years ago, just hatching 'em like chickens and feeding 'em like domestic poultry. He had pens in his backyard—which, by the way, is the backyard of one of Maine's more historic old mansions—and when he noticed that the pheasants were hatching around the wire pens, he tucked some brush in one corner and let it go at that.

Meanwhile, a lot of fancy talk was being broadcast about the difficulties of raising Ring-necked and Mutants. This irked "Horace," as his friends all know him, and he took pen in hand and wrote an article for the Boston, Mass., "Herald," pointing out that game breeders weren't seeing the woods for the trees. The story won his national recognition. Shortly, he found himself game editor of "Field & Stream," then, he was asked to write stories on the subject for "The Saturday Evening Post" and similar slick paper magazines.

The editors paid such fantastic amounts that boy-like for he was quite young then, he moved into a whole suite of rooms in a Portsmouth, N. H. hotel and lived like one of the royal litters of that day. This went on until other writers nudged in on his ideas and stole some of his thunder.

Mr. Mitchell has a keen sense of Yankee humor. He wrote many first-page, black-face features for such papers as "The Boston Herald," following his start as a nationally known writer. These little pieces concerned ducks crossed with parrots that flew South to size up the duck situation and returned to "Yankee" to inform their masters of the picture, flat eggs that could be shipped more easily and which were ideal for making omelets, pigs that wore goggles to provide tracer meat for farmers; and many other little pieces of his sharp wit. Then, he started the Kittory Press, married a charming school teacher and has as happily ever after as is possible in such hectic times.

All of which brings us back to his present title of Game Breeding Editor, "Sports Afford."

Recently, he called at the State House in Augusta. He talked with the Governor, had lunch with the Fish-Game Commissioner and dropped into the Public Relations office to pass on a money-making idea for Maine folks who live in the country.

"The chief crops of many of our small farms nowadays," he vowed, "are perspiration and taxes, and most of us would have a tough time raising these."

Instead, Mr. Mitchell suggests that such farmers raise pheasants, bob white quail and mallard ducks. He says there is a big demand from clubs for these birds and a further demand for the table. He says, in his position as game editor, he gets scores of letters requesting information on where such birds can be purchased, that prices are high, that he will pass on specific information to anybody in Maine who is interested.

"There's a million bucks waiting for the fellow who can solve the problem of successfully raising rafted grouse, or partridge, as we call 'em in Maine," he added.

Mr. Mitchell thinks some Maine man might solve this riddle as easily, perhaps, as he first solved himself the problem of pheasant raising.

EASY DOES IT
A VOID VIOLENT BOILING when you're cooking vegetables. After the food comes to a steam, lower the heat to the lowest temperature required to maintain steaming. This keeps vegetables whole and decreases loss of water-soluble substances.

Curdling in scalloped omelets can be prevented by making a white sauce of the milk and cheese before combining it with other ingredients.

Any dishes with milk should be baked by setting the dish prepared in a pan of water. This allows a more even temperature for the cooking and also prevents scorching.

When broiling, use no extra fat with fat fish. For lean fish, rub the fish with fat before broiling. Use moderate heat in broiling and keep fish at least six inches from the unit.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Celery Seed Dressing
(Makes 1½ cups)
3 hard-cooked egg yolks
3 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons celery seed
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon onion salt
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
1 cup tomato juice
½ cup salad oil

Mash egg yolks; blend in vinegar. Add seasonings and tomato juice. Add oil gradually, stirring constantly. Serve on a salad made of four or more of the following: endive, romaine, lettuce, chicory, watercress, raw young spinach leaves, young dandelion leaves, sliced cucumbers, sliced green pepper, sliced tomatoes or radishes.

Are your soft-cooked eggs for breakfast tough these days? It's probably because they have been boiled furiously for their three minutes instead of cooked gently. Eggs are rich in protein that toughens readily when high temperatures are used for cooking.

Don't be afraid to wash your poultry before cooking. Use a soft brush or cloth and run water through the cavity of the bird. Brushing the outside of the bird will make it easy to get rid of dirtier spots where feathers were singed.

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

SHE CAME into my office one day in June. It was hot, and I was out of sorts, anyway. Old Man Finstein of Magnificent Pictures had told me to dig up a lass to play a sweet-tempered, innocent country girl in his latest film. Something genuine, he said. That made me mad. There wasn't a sweet-tempered, innocent country girl in the whole of Hollywood. Did the man think I was a magician?

She stood in front of my desk and dug a toe into the floor and looked at me shyly. She was wearing a gingham dress and her hair was done in braids down her back. I smirked. This kid had learned from somewhere that I needed a part for Finstein's picture and she'd called herself out to what she thought was a sweet-tempered country-girl costume and was applying for the job. It kind of disgusted me, pulling an old gag like that. She must be pretty desperate, I thought.

"You're cuckoo," I said. "If you think anything innocent ever looked like that."

Her eyes grew round. She didn't seem to get it. "My name's Mary Smith," she recited. "I'm from New England, where I played the leading role in—"

"Sure, sure," I interrupted. "You were the heroine in the high school senior play in West Bicycle, New Hampshire. They told you you were good, so you came out here to give Hollywood a break. Decent of you."

"It wasn't the senior play," she corrected. "It was the Village Dramatic society. And it wasn't in West Bicycle, New Hampshire. It was North Valley, Vermont. And Mr. Emery did say I was good."

"But even so," I helped out, "you wouldn't have come to wicked Hollywood unless the mortgage was due on the old homestead and your poor mother was about to be tossed out on her ear."

She dropped her eyes. "Mr. Emery must have written you about it. He said he would. I—I felt so ashamed I asked him not to." She looked up eagerly. "You have got a job for me, haven't you?—I can play most anything."

I felt like swearing, and did. She blushed. It was the blush that got me. If the kid could pull an act like that—even down to blushing—I figured she was the one for the part.

"You win," I said. "I'll give you a try, anyway. But you're cockeyed if you think that rig had anything to do with it. I'll tell my secretary to give you a note to the wardrobe department. They'll fit you out in what a real New England girl should wear. Report to stage 5 in an hour."

It was a week later that I met Finstein. "Terry," he said, "you're a genius. How do you do it?"

"It's a gift," I said. "Do what?"

"Pick them out. That girl? She's wonderful! She's genuine!"

"What girl?" I said.

"Mary Smith. The girl from Vermont. She's going to make that picture box-office. Terry, did you where do you find 'em?"

"Oh, hell!" I said, and remembered the doubts and fears I'd en-tained after taking her on. Once or twice I'd been afraid Finstein might fire me. Well, it looked as though the thing had turned out pretty well. "Listen," I said. "She's still not calling herself Mary Smith, is she?"

Finstein nodded. I laughed. "That kid believes in following through. I wonder what her real name is and how she had the nerve to pull that gag."

Once or twice after that I went down to the lot to watch Mary Smith work. She was doing all right. To see her act you'd think she couldn't help being shy and unsophisticated. She was pretty, too. I considered asking her to go out to dinner, and changed my mind. It's against the rules to take out a player when she's doing a part.

A month later the picture was finished and I thought of calling up Mary. But I didn't have to. That morning she came into my office wearing the same gingham dress.

She had come, she said, to thank me for being so kind to her. "Forget it, kid," I said. "Stick around. Maybe I can do something else for you."

"Oh, thank you," she said. "I really couldn't. I've made enough money to pay off the mortgage and I'm going home and help mama raise chickens."

I began to get mad. "Cut out the acting," I said. "It's all over. Be yourself for awhile. Say, I'll bet you're all right when you're yourself."

But it didn't do any good. Mary Smith managed a shy and pretty blush and turned and went out. I grunted. Well, let her cool off for awhile. She'd be coming back soon enough for another job.

But she didn't. The summer passed, and the winter. I thought about her once in awhile. Some other studio must have picked her up.

That spring I tried looking her up, but without any luck. Finstein was sending me east to look up some country for his new picture, "Hounded Woman." It was a good story, and we planned to do big things with it.

It was hot in New York, and one week-end I drove up country on a scouting expedition. The following Monday I found myself in Vermont—standing at a crossroad sign marked "North Valley."

I had a kind of queer feeling when I turned down that road. I came to a village with a general store. A man answered my question. "You go down that way a piece and turn left. It's the first house on the right. You can't miss it."

"I didn't," Mary herself, wearing a gingham dress and a sunbonnet, came out to see what I wanted. She had a basket full of eggs. Her eyes grew round as saucers at sight of me.

"Well, of all things!" she said. "You—came all the way back here just to find me." The old blush came into her cheeks. "Oh—I hoped you would. Please come up to the house and have some butter-milk."

I did.

Farm Workers Are Protected By Social Security Benefits

AN EMPLOYEE of a greenhouse called his local social security office. "I hear that people who work on a farm have been brought under social security. How about me? Do I now have social security like regular farm workers?"

The answer was: "Yes, you are a farm worker."

It was explained that, for old-age and survivors insurance purposes under social security, a "farm" is defined in its broadest sense. It includes not only a greenhouse when used primarily for the raising of agricultural or horticultural commodities, but any other acre or fraction of an acre commercially used for agriculture, horticulture, or animal husbandry.

Equally broad is the social security definition of a farm employee. It includes not only the man on a tractor in a potato field, and the man at the putting bench in the greenhouse, but also some 600,000 other regular workers, whether hired to herd sheep on a New Mexico mesa, or milk milking-shorthorns on an Iowa stock farm.

Whether or not the job of a farm worker is covered for old-age and survivors insurance depends on three things: First, his employer by the farm operator during a three-month qualifying period.

Second, his regular work for the same employer during the qualifying period. Third, his earnings of $50 or more for each three-month period.

The "qualifying" three-month period does not in itself count towards social security payments, but the first step to that end for a farm worker is the "qualifying quarter."

It must be a calendar quarter—that is, a three-month period beginning with January, April, July, or October. The worker who is employed by one operator continuously during a calendar quarter may then begin to get a social security credit for his wages in the following quarter, by working 14 days or more on a full-time basis for the same employer for each wage of $50 or more.

The test that he must continue to meet, quarter after quarter, is the same. His next wage for this necessaryman must be $50 or more, and $50 or more in each every calendar quarter. As long as he meets these conditions, his social security credit will be built up quarter by quarter, and he will be building towards old-age and survivors insurance protection.

However, if in any three-quarter period he fails to work as a necessaryman for the same employer for at least 14 days, the calendar quarter will be lost. He will no longer be a regular worker, and his social security credit will be lost for less than 14 days of work.

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER
Abraham, God's Pioneer
Genesis 12: 1-9; 13: 14-17
Memory Selection: Hebrews 11: 10

ABRAHAM was a pioneer in migrating from one country to another. From ancient Ur of the Chaldees to Padan-aram, and from that place to several in Canaan gave him quite a bit of moving in the course of years.

But more than pioneer in migrating from one place to another, Abraham was the pioneer of God in spiritual things. Through faith he departed for Canaan, and through faith was he sustained through all the changes of his career.

We do not know in what way God spoke to Abraham at Padan-aram. On whatever way it was, God's call was at once answered.

It was a spiritual objective that led Abraham across the deserts to Canaan—he looked for a city that had foundations, whose maker and builder is God.

In the several places where he sojourned in Canaan, Abraham built altars unto God. If we could have family altars all over our country, we should have no fear of the future.

In Canaan Abraham demonstrated his unselfishness and greatness of soul. He allowed his nephew, Lot, to choose what part of the land he would take for himself and his flocks. While Lot prospered but came to sorrow and grief, Abraham not only gained wealth but also received the promise of God that his posterity would become a great nation.

Man of faith, the friend of God, the founder of the new race, Abraham has been the ages an example of trust in God.

ELIMINATE FIRE

HAZARDS NOW

Farm fires in the United States cost about $102,000,000 in 1950. Some of that total figure came from Oxford County. Let's all put on a drive this year to see that this county doesn't get figured in. Informed sources say that 90% of all farm fires are the result of carelessness of some kind. This being the case many of these fires can be prevented. The best way to fight a fire is to prevent it from starting.

A thorough inspection of the whole farmstead will help show-up some hazards that possibly have not been thought of before. Removal of all hazards and possible hazards is the first step in fire prevention.

Fire extinguishers kept in good repair and in several central locations on the farmstead are a big factor in saving the buildings and livestock.

A farm pond located near the farm buildings have saved several farms in Maine.

A pressure water system with hoses and ladders handy is invaluable. If a fire should break out, let's make Oxford County farm buildings and surroundings as safe from fire as possible by looking for fire hazards and eliminating them.

THE BALLAD OF THE PINE

Addie Kendall Mason
For uncounted years I have reigned supreme

With the trees of the forest wide; Aloft I've waved my colors green With no care for the wind or tide With proud disdain my limbs I've tossed

In the soothing Summer breeze; No trouble to me was the Winter's frost Nor old Borrass rush amongst the trees.

But alas! the ax of the woodman held Has laid bare my brave old heart To the jeers and scoffs of the world so cold

Who ne'er in my life had part Ah! never again 'neath my pleasant shade Will the children romp with glee; Nor the feathered songsters from every glade

Fill my branches with melody. The bright eyed squirrels will never more Chase each other, no glad and wild;

Around my trunk as they did of yore When the Autumn days were mild. My colors will trail in the dust so gray

While their emerald green grows brown; The fox has beaten me in the fray The king of "Pine Woods" is down.

My proud old head ye have brought to earth My heart ye have broken in twain; My body ye'll bear from the place of its birth As a thing, shall I never more reign?

But hark ye afar from these hillsides fair Have gone many a youth and maid, Whose thoughts oft turn to the days so rare

When they roamed neath "Pine Woods" shade. And better women and men are they For the days spent with me and mine.

And the lessons learned in the orphanage gray Neath the shade of the murmuring pine. And weird fancies will come to them

Of the pine trees mournful thrill - Though you banish me from my longtime realm Yet my kingdom's a kingdom still.

My scepter, the tassled cone of green. With ribbons so deftly bound In the halls of the rich and great is seen

On the cottagers walls it is found My subjects ye'll find them in every land In valley on mountain or plain

With hearts ever true to one emblem grand The pine tree of dear old Maine

CHRISTMAS CLUB FUNDS

REACH $252,000.00

Nine hundred and fifty-two million dollars will be distributed to about ten million eight hundred and seventy five thousand Christmas Club members by approximately sixty two hundred banking and savings institutions during National Prosperity Week, starting Monday, November 26th, according to an estimate given out yesterday by Edward F. Dorset, President of Christmas Club, a Corporation of New York.

The total distribution is 2.4% ahead of last year and represents an all time high for the forty one years of Christmas Club operation. The average per member distribution is about $47.50 for the entire country, as against $43.57 last year. In the large metropolitan areas the average per member distribution is approximately $49.00. The total number of individual members participating this year is approximately the same as a year ago.

Christmas Club, a Corporation, believes that this continuing increase in Christmas Club Savings shows a definite trend in the public thinking toward individual financial security which is the ultimate financial security of the nation.

Roscoe Clark purchased a farm at Lisbon. The so-called M. D. Sturtevant house on Main St. was sold to Mrs. Angela Clark.

STATE OF MAINE PROCLAMATION

BY THE GOVERNOR

Whereas, our forefathers decreed that one day each year be set aside for the purpose of expressing our gratitude to God for the many blessings with which we are endowed; and

Whereas, the same perseverance and courage, which carried the Puritans through their hardships, is needed today to lead us through the international strife which is threatening our democratic way of life; and

Whereas, our natural resources are still undeveloped; in many instances, and our crops and harvests have been exceptionally bountiful; and

Whereas, we should be thankful for the progress made in agriculture over the years, which has truly made this a "land of plenty," and give thanks to our good Lord for the wisdom and guidance which have carried us through social and economic upheavals, and pray that He continue to guide us through the difficult period ahead;

Now, Therefore, I, FREDERICK G. PAYNE, Governor of the State of Maine, do hereby proclaim

Thursday, November 22, 1951

THANKSGIVING DAY

and urge appropriate observances in our churches, homes and schools in continuance of our honored custom and as an expression of appreciation for the numerous blessings which are ours.

Given at the office of the Governor at Augusta, and sealed with the Great Seal of the State of Maine, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-one, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the One Hundred and Seventy-sixth.

Frederick G. Payne, Governor

By the Governor

INCREASING INTEREST SHOWN IN ELECTRIFICATION CONTEST

After holding regional meetings and demonstrations at which forty-one schools in northern and eastern Maine were represented by over 900 chapter members of Future Homemakers of America and Future Farmers of America, Frank R. Bailey, state organizer for the electric utility companies, reports much greater interest is being shown than last year when he was organizing the first Electrification Essay Contest.

To help the students better understand how electricity is being used to lighten the work in the home and on the farm, Mr. Bailey uses a simple demonstration to show how Light, Heat and Power are obtained by the "flip" of a switch. By the use of farm pictures, he explains how Reddy Kilowatt works for the dairyman, the poultryman, and the general farmer. A model modern electric kitchen in miniature is used to show kitchen planning and the saving in time, steps and labor when electric equipment is used in the home.

To compare costs of electric service, Mr. Bailey analyzes actual electric service bills, pointing out amounts applicable to various household and farm uses. A booklet on adequate wiring, grounding, and fusing is left with the students for further class study. The essay is to be based on what electricity is doing to lighten the work in the home and on the farm. Essays will be graded on knowledge of subject, originality, and organization of subject material. Enrollment in the contest must be made by chapter members not later than midnight, November 15th. The contest closes and essays must be completed not later than January 15, 1952.

Chapter advisors agree that the banquet promised for the top ranking 100 girls and 100 boys to be held at the University of Maine is the award of most interest to their students. However, they will all try for the $100 cash award for both a boy and a girl for the best essay in the state and the $480 dividend as county awards.

As a memento of the contest, every boy or girl enrolling and submitting an essay will receive a Reddy Kilowatt souvenir.

From attendance in the following schools where meetings have already been held, it is expected more than 1,000 chapter members of FFA and FFA groups will enroll in the electrification contest this year. Schools represented at regional meetings to date are: Unity, Freedom, Fairfield, Dover, Dexter, Guilford, Newcastle, Waldoboro, Boothbay, Skowhegan, Madison, Brooks, Hampden, Old Town, Hermon, Camden, Winslow, Hartland, Newport, Corinna, Jonesport, Machias, Lubec, Presque Isle, Mapleton, Easton, Washburn, Calais, Ashland, Fort Kent, Madawaska, Van Buren, Canton, Limestone, Mars Hill, Houlton, Patten, Lincoln, Bluehill, Southwest Harbor, and Ellsworth. Organization meetings for the balance of the state have already been scheduled and will be held up to November 15th.

Maine apples are delicious raw in salads, fruit cups, sliced, or to eat out of hand. Enjoy Maine apples every day this fall and winter.

Chapter advisors agree that the banquet promised for the top ranking 100 girls and 100 boys to be held at the University of Maine is the award of most interest to their students. However, they will all try for the $100 cash award for both a boy and a girl for the best essay in the state and the $480 dividend as county awards.

As a memento of the contest, every boy or girl enrolling and submitting an essay will receive a Reddy Kilowatt souvenir.
